Terry Anderson Joins Pikes Peak Habitat as Chief Operating Officer

Colorado Springs, CO (May 1, 2024) — Pikes Peak Habitat for Humanity is pleased to announce that Terry Anderson has joined our staff as chief operating officer, effective immediately.

Anderson transitioned from Springs Rescue Mission, where he served as COO from 2017-24, vice president of enterprise and work readiness from 2016-17, and vice president of enterprise and administration from 2013-15. He previously served as director and regional manager at Lewan & Associates.

"I'm excited to join the Pikes Peak Habitat staff," he says. "I love the mission! During my time at Springs Rescue Mission, I worked with people who didn't have housing options, or didn't have housing options they could afford. So I understand the importance of opportunities for workforce families, seniors, veterans, and others in our community to be able to purchase and remain in affordable homes."

In his role at Pikes Peak Habitat, Anderson will oversee the construction, homebuying, and home repair programs, as well as the ReStores.

"We're thrilled to welcome Terry to our team," says Pikes Peak Habitat CEO Kris Lewis. "He will be a valuable addition, particularly with his proven leadership record and his knowledge of the challenges faced by too many El Paso County residents, who have found themselves priced out of the housing market. We look forward to working with Terry to further our mission of partnering with workforce families to build strength, stability, and self-reliance through shelter."
